New SCDA Website Devoted to Horse Industry Puts Wealth of Information in One Place

Want to know more about our state's horse industry? The S.C. Department of Agriculture has launched a new website devoted to horses. It encompasses all facets of the horse business, from trail riding to Thoroughbred racing, places to camp, fox hunting, major and private arenas, polo, youth organizations, and

"Our horse industry is rich and diverse, but there isn't a site that puts all the information together, said SCDA equine marketing specialist Marsha Hewitt. "We're doing that with our new website." With thousands of horse owners in dozens of different disciplines, Carolina becoming a destination state for many types of people.

Trail riders come from all over the Southeast to take advantage of public lands, including state and county parks, private but horse-friendly properties such as Hitchcock Woods in Aiken, and commercial venues that provide excellent amenities for horse lovers of all types. For example, the American Heart Association annual beach ride, set this year for Nov. 9 through 13, draws 2,000 riders from across the country.

The sport of horse racing, which dates back to Colonial times, is thriving, with five sanctioned National Steeplechase Association meets and several other races that draw thousands of spectators. The Kings Tree Trials, which will be run Nov. 5 in Williamsburg County, is celebrating its 21st year. Local trainers Bobbie and Debbie McCutchen partner with the Greater Williamsburg Chamber of Commerce to host a fun-filled race meet, featuring Thoroughbred and Quarter Horses, that the whole family can enjoy.

The Colonial Cup, steeplechase racing's of interest.

richest event in the U.S., will be held Nov. 19 at Springdale Race Course in Camden. The $100,000 purse on the feature race lures the best steeplechasers and trainers in the world and makes for a thrilling event.

"Our racehorse industry is mind-boggling, with about two dozen privately owned training tracks that turn out hundreds of top-class horses," Hewitt continued. "Many of the owners live out of state, but they send their horses here to take advantage of the great climate, footing, and excellent trainers." A website segment on racing will link to the SC Thoroughbred Owners and Breeders Association.

A section for Youth will include the names of the schools, both public and private, that make up the Interscholastic Equestrian Program, which allows kids who don't own horses to ride on a team. The Intercollegiate program lists the seven colleges in South Carolina that offer equestrian studies as well as having competitive riding teams. High School Rodeo and Pony Club will round out the Youth section.

"People may not know that our state has seven foxhunting clubs, from the Lowcountry to the Upstate, and that Aiken is one of the top polo venues in the country," Hewitt continued. We also have several top notch arenas that draw competitors from many other states."

The website will continue to evolve. For example, a future tab will list the clubs and professional associations in the state. Other topics, such as services like equine vets, equine chiropractors, and farriers, are being compiled. A tab for celebrities, both horse and human, will be added.

Prepare to Protect

October used to be about pumpkins, trick-or-treating and candy. Now it seems to be about natural disasters for South Carolinians, with the thousand-year flood in 2015 and then in 2016, the first Category 5 hurricane to hit the Atlantic Coast in nearly a decade. Almost a year to the day after the flood, Hurricane Matthew traveled up our coastline. traveled up our coastline leaving devastation in its wake. But, thanks to a thoughtful, well-executed plan, South Carolinians weathered the storm.

Much preparation and practice goes into emergency response plans, often through tabletop exercises throughout the year depicting real-time emergency situations. Everyone knows well in advance their duties in a time of emergency, and there is strong cooperation and collaboration between state agencies throughout the preparation, response and recovery process.

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture is involved in several Emergency Support Emergency Support Functions (ESFs). In ESF-17, Animal Emergency Response, SCDA staff work with Clemson to identify shelters for pets, livestock and horses. ESF-11, Food Services, works with ESF-6, Mass Care, to procure and distribute food to shelters. We assist the Department of Social Services and Department of Education in ESF-11.

Kids Growing Their Own Vegetables

Farm to School kicks off in Spartanburg

Students at Fairforest Elementary School in Spartanburg School District 6 are excited about growing their own fresh fruits and vegetables.

As part of the SC Farm to School grant program, the upstate school held a Growing Green Kickoff Event on Oct. 20 to celebrate the beginning of their school garden. The event was complete with a parade, ribbon cutting and a symbolic first planting.

Every student in the school attended the event along with teachers, parents, community partners and numerous local and state dignitaries. Students were encouraged to dress as farmers, and some classes wore handmade fruit or vegetable hats. Several spirited parents also donned produce costumes to take part in the parade.

"While this contagious excitement continues to grow, soon these K-5 students will be watching their garden grow as well," said Betsy Dorton, SC Farm to School Coordinator.

Prepare to Protect

During Hurricane Matthew, 355,000 people were evacuated from coastal counties in just three days. The lane reversals on interstate 26 required significant input from the National Guard and they had to secure each and every exit for eastbound traffic before the lanes could be reversed. School buses were deployed from Greenville County to assist those without access to transportation. At peak, there were 77 shelters housing 6,700 people. These shelters have to be equipped with generators in case of power outages, food and water.

Nearly 450 state roads and bridges were closed during the hurricane. In order for debris removal to take place, the Department of Commerce has to authorize private companies to begin the clean up process. 866,000 A staggering people were without power. Electric cooperatives around the state deployed linemen to assist in restoring power.

Now we're moving into the recovery phase, post-hurricane. Agricultural damage is still being assessed. Rivers in the Pee Dee did not reach crest until two weeks after the storm passed through, so we are still trying to gain a clear view of losses. While the overall damage won't rival that of the flood, certain areas have lost more as a result of the hurricane. We continue to work with SC Farm Bureau, Clemson, SC Forestry Commission and Farm Service Agency to determine just how much of an economic loss this storm will be. If you had agricultural damage as a result of the hurricane, I encourage you to reach out to your FSA office for emergency assistance.

Natural disasters cannot be prevented, but we work hard to find ways to mitigate the storms left in their path. Governor Haley faced this event by striving to stay two days ahead of the impending landfall, storm surge, and other issues, leaving nothing up to chance. In the face of Hurricane Matthew, South Carolinians benefitted from a meticulously executed plan to protect that most certainly saved lives. I commend our Governor and other state leaders for handling this crisis in an efficient, careful manner.

4-H continues to GROW at the State Fair

South Carolina 4-H is growing and had a large presence at the State Fair held Oct. 12-23. This year SC 4-H hosted its first Alumni Day and Luncheon as part of the SC GROWS campaign.

SC Superintendent of Education Molly Spearman, a 4-H alumna, spoke on the life skills she learned through SC 4-H as a young girl. Another proud alumnus, Gary Goodman, CEO and General Manager of the SC State Fair, made a generous donation to the SC 4-H in order to continue building programs and educational opportunities.
